I think the following arrangement would work satisfactorily.

In the event of an outbreak of an epidemic disease in fairs and festivals the fact should at once be reported by wire (from the nearest telegraph station) to the Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of Bombay, Poona as well as to the Sanitary Commissioner for Madras. ~~Repd~~ Report of the outbreak of epidemic diseases in fairs held in the Bombay and Madras Presidencies will be furnished by wire to the Sanitary Commissioner in Mysore, who will without delay communicate such report to the Deputy Commissioners as well as to the District Sanitary Officers.

Adverting to your letter No. 3169-76 dated the 11th January 1915 calling for my views as to the arrangements necessary for the prompt exchange of information about the outbreak of epidemics during fairs and festivals between the authorities of the Madras, Bombay and Mysore Governments, I have the honor to state that I generally agree with the method of exchange of communication proposed by you. But as nothing is said regarding who should send the wire about the outbreak of the disease, I would suggest that they should issue from the Amildars if they are present on the spot and if otherwise they should arrange to get the information promptly and then send a wire, reporting the fact to the Deputy Commissioner at the same time. Such an addition seems to be necessary to the arrangement proposed by you.

With reference to your letter No. 3169-76 dated the 11th Instant, I have the honor to state that the proposed exchange of information between the Sanitary authorities of the British and Mysore Governments regarding out-breaks of Infectious Diseases during fairs and festivals is really necessary for the prevention of the spread of such diseases in epidemic form when occurring and the arrangement suggested in your letter under reference of communicating information of outbreaks, if any, of such diseases by wire is in my opinion, well suited. A list of dangerous Infectious Diseases ~~dessominated~~ disseminated by human intercourse may be drawn up and furnished for guidance. It may perhaps be necessary to have compulsory notification of such diseases on the occasions.
